Mothering in the modern age can be a challenge. These days, the umbilical cords for most kids are high-tech gadgets and social media. In a way, our kids do know everything now.

But it's a complicated world and children still need their mothers. From kissing boo-boos to teaching the difference between right and wrong to helping navigate the ups and downs of teenage drama, moms unselfishly give their children the advice, support and love they need.

The stories in this book—ranging from birth to empty nest—are guaranteed to entertain and delight. And remember—moms do know more than their kids when it comes to the real world!
